

Concordia University School of Law

3 + 3 Program Requirements

Students at Boise State University may be approved for admission to the School of Law after approximately three year of undergraduate study through the 3 + 3 Program.

Students interested in the 3 + 3 Program must:

- Satisfy all requirements imposed by Concordia University School of Law and Boise State University (including Foundational Studies, academic, disciplinary, and financial standing).

- Since the undergraduate major department must agree to accept some School of Law credits to satisfy their major requirements, interested students should contact their academic advisor when they begin to consider the Program. When necessary, the Boise State 3+3 Program Coordinator may confer with the Admissions Director at the School of Law to determine whether the student's major is appropriate for the 3 & 3 Program.

- Have an LSAT score of 150 or higher, and a cumulative undergraduate GPA of 3.0 or better.

- Express interest in the program by having the Boise State 3+3 Program Coordinator submit a "3 & 3 Program Registration Form" to the Concordia University School of Law Admissions Office during the Spring semester of the student's sophomore year-no later than February 1st of the sophomore year. This requirement may be deferred for specific majors or delayed when agreed to in advance.

- Take the Law School Admission Test (LSAT) in June following the student's sophomore year or September during the student's junior year.

- Apply for admission to the School of Law no later than February 1st of the calendar year in which the student intends to transfer (typically, the student's junior year).

- Provide certification from the Boise State University Registrar's Office that all requirements for the award of a baccalaureate degree, including but not limited to the completion of 90 semester hours will have been completed before entering the School of Law and that the student will receive a baccalaureate degree if the School of Law first year curriculum (30 credit hours) is successfully completed by the student. (This certification is due at the time of the School of Law application.) This requirement may be adjusted for specific majors that require a summer course after the School of Law first year curriculum.

- * Provide an official Boise State University transcript to the Concordia University School of Law Office of Admission by August 1st, before transferring, to certify completion of 90 semester hours. Some extensions may be possible if approved in advance.

* The student must request that the Concordia University School of Law transfer back the first 30 credits to Boise State University to continue in the program. The acceptance of credits from Concordia University, via transfer or testing, toward completion of baccalaureate degree requirements shall be governed by Boise State University policies (including a C- or better in all classes or by approval).

* It is understood that completion of the first year of the School of Law will count toward the student's residency requirement of 30 upper-division credits at Boise State University.

* The student must complete the Boise State University graduation application by the posted deadline for the appropriate year.

* Concordia University will confer the Juris Doctor degree to a student who successfully completes all three years of the law program.
