Students at Boise State University may be approved for admission to the College of Law after three years of undergraduate study through the 3 + 3 Program.

Students interested in the 3 + 3 Program must:

• Satisfy all requirements imposed by University of Idaho College of Law and Boise State University (including Foundational Studies, academic, disciplinary, and financial standing).

• Since the undergraduate major department must agree to accept some College of Law credits to satisfy their major requirements, interested students should contact their academic advisor when they begin to consider the Program. When necessary, the Boise State 3+3 Program Coordinator may confer with the Admissions Director at the College of Law to determine whether the student's major is appropriate for the 3 & 3 Program.

• Have an LSAT score at or above the College of Law's median, and a cumulative undergraduate GPA of 3.3 or better.

• Express interest in the program by having the Boise State 3+3 Program Coordinator submit a "3 & 3 Program Registration Form" to the University of Idaho College of Law Admissions Office during the Spring semester of the student's sophomore year-no later than May 15th. This requirement may be deferred for specific majors.

• Take the Law School Admission Test (LSAT) in June following the student's sophomore year or September during the student's junior year.

• Apply for admission to the College of Law no later than Feb. 15th of the student's junior year (*please note that this is one month earlier than the deadline for non-3&3 Program admission-the regular admissions priority deadline is March 15th).

• Provide certification from the Boise State University Registrar’s Office that all requirements for the award of a baccalaureate degree, including but not limited to the completion of 90 semester hours will have been completed before entering the College of Law and that the student will receive a baccalaureate degree if the College of Law first year curriculum (30 credit hours) is successfully completed by the student. (This certification is due at the time of the College of Law application.) This requirement may be adjusted for specific majors that require a summer course after the College of Law first year curriculum.
* Provide an official Boise State University transcript to University of Idaho College of Law Office of Admission by August 1st, before transferring, to certify completion of 90 semester hours. Some extensions may be possible if approved in advance.

* The student must request that the University of Idaho College of Law transfer back the first 30 credits to Boise State University to continue in the program. The acceptance of credits from University of Idaho, via transfer or testing, toward completion of baccalaureate degree requirements shall be governed by Boise State University policies (including a C- or better in all classes or by approval).

* It is understood that completion of the first year of the College of Law will count toward the student's residency requirement of 30 upper-division credits at Boise State University.

* The student must complete the Boise State University graduation application by the posted deadline for the appropriate year.

* University of Idaho will confer the Juris Doctor degree to a student who successfully completes all three years of the law program.
